REPORT DAMAGE TO TOBACCO BEDS

Time Is Now Ripe To Begin Blue Mold Control, Says County Agent Dyer

Since the appearance of blue mold has been reported in the county, Byron Dyer, county agent, urges tobacco growers to carry out recommended practices for controlling this disease.

"Tobacco plants are smaller than at this time last year," Mr. Dyer said. "Stands on a good many beds are rather thin, therefore, it is important to save all the plants that can be saved."

Regular spraying of tobacco beds is the cheapest and most practical method for controlling blue mold, the county agent said. "Many spray materials when properly used, will control this plant disease, but only three are considered practical enough to be recommended. These are (1) ferimate, (2) bismuth subaulylate, and (3) yellow copper oxide-cottonseed oil emulsion."

Bismuth subaulylate is the most effective of the recommended spray materials recommended for blue mold control, Mr. Dyer stated. "Ferimate is almost as good as bismuth subaulylate. Ferimate is the cheapest of the spray materials and is the easiest and simplest to use."

The only equipment required for spraying the average-sized bed is an inexpensive bucket pump and a suitable length of hose with a nozzle, the agent pointed out.

Bulloch county tobacco growers may secure directions for mixing and applying spray materials for blue mold control from the county agent's office.

More than 3,000,000 plants were brought into the county in 1944 at considerable expense as well as delays in getting the crop going. The follow that sprayed their seed beds in 1944 had ample plants for their crop on time.

By using the vine cuttings most of the disease present in the mother potato can be left there.

To follow this plan, Mr. Dyer said, it is necessary to bed eight to ten bushels of seed for each five acres to be planted. This will allow setting one acre for the mother patch from which vine cuttings can be taken to set five acres of potatoes.

"These things are the 'know how' in successful potato production," Mr. Dyer declared, "but marketing really begins with the selection of the seed. That's why it is so important to use only seed and plants from sources that have devoted their time to improving their stock by selection in the field from high-yielding, uniform potatoes."

The best seller on most markets is the Louisiana type Porto Rican which is the copper skinned potato, the county agent asserted. It is a high yielding, early maturing potato which is high in sugar and moisture content.

SELECT POTATOES WITH GREAT CARE
County Agent Dyer Says Much Depends Upon First Step Taken In Production

The Bulloch county farmer who selects good seed has made the first important step in the production of good yields of marketable sweet potatoes, County Agent Byron Dyer, pointed out this week.

Production of No. 1 potatoes is the main objective of any producer growing them for market.

Selecting seed to bed from a source known to be high yielding and disease-free is of utmost importance, he continued. "One of the best ways to get disease-free seed is to buy certified seed from a reliable grower and then treat the seed with a corrosive sublimate solution."

This solution is made, Mr. Dyer said, by mixing three ounces of corrosive sublimate (mercuric chloride) and with 22½ gallons of water.

Surviving her are two sisters, Mrs. Ella Driggers, Stilson, and Mrs. Ella Grooms, Leeleaf; a brother, P. S. Richardson, of Stilson, and a large number of nieces and nephews.

Whose Business Is It?

THE AFFAIRS of this world have become so intimately involved that no man can reasonably claim to be absolutely free to do as he pleases. Neither can a woman, for that matter, and we are going to deal with that phase further along.

No man's rights are unaffected when they reach that point at which other men's rights begin, and since public welfare involves even the most intimate affairs of life, there is no absolute freedom of conduct.

A year-old youngster is said to have confided in his older brothers his vehement objection to modern bottle methods of mothers in the feeding of their young. Said the youngster, "No incident of life makes me so exceeding wroth as to have ashes falling in my eyes when I am trying to eat." Whose business is it, then, besides the mothers' if she departs from the natural and orderly processes of feeding her children?

If the infant has rights—and you agree he has—what about the public rights as well? What about the rights of the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker? Well, we'll tell you. Yesterday the banker went into the closet dragged out a mop and scrubbed up a puddle of milk which had been spread when the mother with the bottle-fed baby let the bottle fall on the floor in the bank. Was it the fed her child? Would she have spit milk on the floor of the bank if she had followed the natural processes?

So again we ask, what rights have we as people to do even the most things of life when they began to lop over and spread themselves out in the important affairs of other men? Let's have a law on the matter of bottle-feeding in public places.

Luscious Strawberries

AS WE PASSED the door of one of our modern grocery establishments at an early moment on a recent morning, the industrious clerks were dragging into the store off the sidewalk the vanload of fancy stuff which had been deposited there for the beginning of the week's business. It was right attractive picture of fruits and vegetables, in the corner of which there was a small container filled with strawberries—red and luscious.

Strawberries always strike our fancy. There is something about the modesty of the little gem which reminds us of the blush on the cheek of the girls we used to see before lipstick and rouge came into vogue. We stopped and asked the clerk if he would charge us anything to tell us the price of a little carton of strawberries. He told us they were only 45 cents. There were as many strawberries as one could hold in an open palm, and we estimated there were around 45 of them. We fell. As we treasured them on the way home, we counted and there were three layers of strawberries with fifteen in each layer. Thus you have seen that our strawberries cost us one cent each.

And then we ruminated. The highest priced strawberries we ever ate were those grown in our own garden. A plant chosen from some point in North Carolina sent us a picture book showing luscious red strawberries and explaining the great profit in their production. A man with reasonable intelligence and industry could make a small fortune in his own back yard. If he cared to, he could even grow enough for an all-summer supply in an ordinary four barrel. All he needed to do was to fill a barrel with rich soil, bore a thousand holes in it, stick a plant in each hole, turn on a little water—and wait.

Have you ever grown strawberries that way? Have you ever tried boring a thousand holes in a barrel, or fill a barrel with rich, loamy soil? Then don't every try either job. You can bore a thousand holes if you start early enough and keep at it late enough—but you can't fill enough soil in the half-acre lot on which you live to fill the barrel.

We bought a thousand plants, bored fifty holes in the barrel, put in a bushel of the most promising soil we could find, stuck the roots of three dozen plants through the holes, poured in water—and sat down to rest and wait for strawberries. We are still tired, and haven't seen a strawberry from that barrel.

We planted the balance of the thousand plants in the back garden, hauled in pinestraw, covered them up to smother the grass down; that fall we got three strawberries. It was a rich spot and the grass came up high and rank. In the dead of winter the strawberries went into hibernation. When spring came again, the grass came first—and from that day to the present we haven't learned what became of the 994 plants we set in our garden. They turned upward apparently headed for China. That was nearly fifty years ago. We don't know how long it would take a strawberry plant to grow through to the other side of the earth—which we understand is approximately 8,000 miles or they may have already burst into the land on the other side, and our Chinese friends—bless their humble hearts—may be feasting on our North Carolina strawberries at this very moment.

That basketful we bought last Monday morning at 1 cent each was cheap compared with those we planted fifty years ago. We have learned that the easiest and cheapest way to raise anything on our farm is to buy it from neighbors who haven't got any better sense than to put themselves out to produce it!

Primitive Baptist Church

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? And what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? Or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Corinthians 6:14, 15, 17, 18.

Our regular services will be held as follows: 10:30 a. m. Saturday, and 11:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. Sunday. A hearty welcome to all.
V. F. AGAN, Pastor.
